P6 Question

I just bought a sig p6 and noticed the gun seems to shoot 6 inches lower than normal. Is this normal? I have heard the Germans are trained differently as far as POA.

I usually aim 6 oclock on bullseye which puts all my rounds 6 inches low at 25 yards. I am thinking of changing sites for this reason, I want my POA and POI on all of my guns to be the same. Any help would be appreciated.

Most Defense type pistols are designed to cover the target with the front sight, in all probability your pistol is sighted correctly for a Sig and you are not used to this non target type sights, you can get different heights of Sig sights if you need to move your groups up.. Regards, Jim

Thanks for the replies, no I'm not flinching thats what I thought at first but put it on a rest same thing. Plus I've shot quite a bit, previous job MCSF battalion.

I guess I will cover the target so the front sight post is at top of the bullseye correct? Instead of at 6 oclock. I'll try that tomorrow and see how it works. I really dont want to put any money into it (new sights).

Another thought after looking at the test target that came with the gun the half black and white circle with the inverted triangle. I am guessing now that the top of the front site is probably alligned with the top of the triangle and the point of impact is the bottom of the triangle. About six inches. I think I figured it out thanks.

Not sure I like it too much seems a little weird.

My P6 shot perfectly. In fact I can blame me more than the P6 for any poor shots. And my P6 is definitely not one of the top ones that came through.

Mine shoots low as well. I find that instead of lining up the top of the two sights, if I line up the middle of the front sight with the top of the rear its right on.

My P6 at 21 feet has to cover the 3" shootNsee bullseye in order to hit CoM. Do the German police train on silhouettes/center of mass?

The range I shoot at only has pistol targets at 25yards, so I am unsure how it would be at 10 or 15 yards.

I normally shoot Berreta M9..

I wouldnt say the gun shoots bad or me; just tight groups low. If I aim higher than I am used too, just above or on top of the bullseye I hit the bullseye. I am just not accustomed to it. And find it awkward.

I was trained to shoot differently in the Marines as far as POA and impact.

The front sight is 8 rear 7.

Dont get me wrong I am not disappointed in the gun especially for the price. I think sig makes a good weapon but I dont see the hype for sigs, the trigger also took alittle getting used to.

Its just different, thanks for all the replies.

Did you try different ammo as well?

If it shoots low from the bench and there's nothing loose or tweaked on the sights or slide to barrel fit, you need to change one of your sights. 6" is a pretty big offset, though, so it's worth looking closer to see what's up.

Here's Sig's reference on the different sight numbers and what you'd need to change.

<http://www.sigsauer.com/CustomerServ...ightPusher.pdf>

Front sights: 1" change between numbers at 25 yards

Rear sights: 2" change between numbers at 25 yards

When changing the sights, remember this rule: "NUMBERS UP, IMPACT UP; NUMBERS DOWN, IMPACT DOWN". This is true whether it concerns the front or rear sights.

If you don't want to change sights, you can raise the POI by filing down the front sight, then re-bluing it when it's done. This only works on blade sights, not dot sights.

Mine's pretty close at 10 yards with a front 8 and a rear 7, and I shoot a 6 o'clock hold with the all-black sights (and with all my iron sight guns).

Nice group! I'll have to bench my Sig to see how accurate it is. Pretty much offhand it is more accurate than my stock 5906.

H & R Garand for sale...SOLD TO TOPGUN7.. Great man. Pleasure to do business with.

I have an H & R Garand for sale. I'd say it's somewhere between rack and service grade condition. I bought it originally at the Old West Gun Room. It shoots great and would make a great collectable rifle.

The gun is C&R and I am willing to meet ftf within REASONABLE distance from Richmond, CA.

Pics will be up tonight sometime.

I am asking 650.00

Price lowered due to in depth appraisal of value.

I'm very tempted. I've seen this gun run once at a Tac handgun match (even saw the muzzle~~??~~). It runs well. Not your average tap-n-rack-amotic 1911.

Approx 800-900 rounds fired. Mix of Fed AF 230gr, Winchester Ranger Talon 230gr, and Black Hills Gold Dot 230gr. Never a malfunction.

WTT Colt 6940 upper with stag lower

I have a complete 6940 colt upper with complete stag lower with Magpul MAID grip and Magpul CTR 6 pos stock. And Troy single point sling adapter.

Looking for semi auto handgun or 308 gun.
Has to be Bay Area so I can do Face to face.
Here is Pic of upper I will try to get a pic of lower later.

Wiling to trade for semi auto hand gun or 308 rifle, make offer.

OK I will entertain any reasonable trades, Handguns semi-auto, or 308 rifle of some kind.
Will only consider FTF transfer in Bay Area.

Do u still have it? I have an original CHP 4006 .40 cal S & W. since I am still active CHP and will most likely buy my current duty weapon, I don't need both. All lazer etched numbers match. Would love to see the AR assembled. Thanks!
